RISK FACTORS

Who is at risk for colorectal cancer?

There are some factors that may increase your risk of developing colorectal cancer:

Unavoidable factors

Some factors that increase your risk of getting colorectal cancer are unavoidable. Getting older is one of them. Your chances of developing this cancer increase after you reach the age of 50. Some other unavoidable risk factors are:

- a prior history of colon polyps

- a prior history of bowel diseases
- a family history of colorectal cancer
- having a genetic syndrome, such as familial adenomatous polyposis (FAP)
- being of Eastern European Jewish or African-American descent

Avoidable factors

Some risk factors for colorectal cancer are:

- being overweight or obese
- smoking
- a heavy use of alcohol
- having type 2 diabetes
- having a sedentary lifestyle
- consuming a diet high in processed foods or red meats

DIAGNOSIS

How is colorectal cancer diagnosed?

Early diagnosis of colorectal cancer gives you the best chance of curing your colorectal cancer. Your doctor will start by getting information about your medical and family history. They'll also perform a physical exam. The doctor may press on your abdomen or perform a rectal exam to determine the presence of lumps or polyps.

Blood testing

Your doctor may run some blood tests to get a better idea of what's causing your symptoms. Though there is no blood test that specifically checks for colorectal cancer, liver function tests and complete blood count (CBC) tests can rule out other diseases and disorders.

Colonoscopy

A colonoscopy involves the use of a long tube with a small, attached camera. This procedure allows your doctor to see inside your colon and rectum, and to note anything unusual. During a colonoscopy, your doctor can also remove tissue from abnormal areas. These tissue samples can then be sent to a laboratory for analysis.

X-ray

Your doctor may order an X-ray using a radioactive contrast solution that contains the metallic element barium. Your doctor will insert this liquid into the bowels through the use of an enema. Once in place, the barium solution coats the lining of the colon, and helps to improve the quality of the X-ray images.

CT scan

CT scans provide your doctor with a detailed image of your colon. In the case of colorectal cancer, another name for a CT scan is a virtual colonoscopy.

TREATMENTS

What are the treatment options for colorectal cancer?

Treatment of colorectal cancer depends on a variety of factors. The state of your overall health and the stage of your colorectal cancer will help your doctor create a treatment plan.

Surgery

In the earliest stages of colorectal cancer, it might be possible for your surgeon to remove cancerous polyps through surgery. During surgery, if the polyp hasn't attached to the wall of the bowels, you'll likely have an excellent outlook.

If your cancer has spread into your bowel walls, your surgeon may need to remove a portion of the colon or rectum, along with any neighboring lymph nodes. If at all possible, your surgeon will reattach the remaining healthy portion of the colon to the rectum. If this isn't possible, they may perform a colostomy. This involves creating an opening in the abdominal wall for the removal of waste. A colostomy may be temporary or permanent.

Chemotherapy

Chemotherapy involves the use of drugs to kill cancer cells. In the case of colorectal cancer, chemotherapy is a common treatment after surgery to destroy any remaining cancerous cells. Chemotherapy also controls the growth of your tumor.

While chemotherapy provides some symptom relief in late-stage cancer, it often comes with side effects that need to be controlled with additional medication.

Radiation

Radiation uses a powerful beam of energy, similar to that used in X-rays, to target and destroy cancerous cells before and after surgery. Radiation therapy commonly occurs alongside chemotherapy.

Medication

In September of 2012, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) approved the drug Stivarga (regorafenib) to treat patients with metastatic, or late-stage, colorectal cancer that doesn't respond to other types of treatment and has spread to other parts of the body. This drug works by blocking enzymes that promote the growth of cancer cells.

OUTLOOK

What is the long-term outlook?

When it's caught early, colorectal cancer is treatable and often curable. With early detection, most people live at least another five years after diagnosis. If the cancer doesn't return in that time, you're considered cured, especially if you're in the first three stages of the disease.

NATIONAL TRENDS & SERVICES FACET
APRIL 2017

The National Trends & Service Facet held its third Senior Citizen event at the West Angeles Villa on Friday, March 2nd, 2018. Western Area HBCU Ambassador

NEWS FLASH March 2018

Dear Link Sister,

Thank you for serving as the HBCU Ambassador for your chapter. You are a vital link for one of our most important initiatives. This newsletter provides info and ideas on how you can most effectively connect our chapters with ways to positively impact the HBCUs in the Western Area and throughout the United States.

In sisterhood and service,

Debora C. Pickens,

Western Area HBCU Chair

HBCU Budget Considerations

A variety of fundraisers and events have allowed the Western Area to generously support our HBCU initiative. In an effort toward sustainability, please encourage your Chapters to include line items in your budgets for an annual HBCU donation.

March is "Love My HBCU Month"

During March, lets take advantage of the opportunity to further highlight the HBCUs in the Western Area, our alma maters, and other schools with special significance to us. Here are some ideas your chapter can use during this month:

- Coordinate a social media campaign where Link sisters post and share info during a specific time period about HBCUs.
- As a group, attend lectures or events at a local HBCU campus.
- Host a tea or wine and cheese reception on the campus in collaboration with other local organizations. Ask university leadership to attend and share priorities.
- Invite prominent community leaders who may not be aware of HBCU impact to lunch with two or three HBCU alumni to casually share and educate for future partnerships.
- Mentor a student who is pursuing a degree in your profession at a local HBCU.
- Offer financial assistance to high school students to defray costs for trips to HBCUs for campus tours.

- Participate in career fairs held at a nearby HBCU.
- Prepare and send care-packages to HBCU students attending HBCUs from out-of-state.
- Partner with your church to host local HBCU students for dinner in your church fellowship hall.

Chapter Highlight Corner: WACO

Waco Central (TX) Chapter is celebrating national "I LOVE my HBCU Month" by inviting Link Sisters and the community to attend their Gospel Extravaganza on March 17th which will benefit HBCU students with scholarships. Scheduled to appear at the Extravaganza are Grambling's Gospel Choir, the Prairie View Gospel Choir, and Baylor University's "Heavenly Voices". For more information, please contact Waco Chapter's HBCU Ambassador Lydia Gaines, lgaines77@yahoo.com.

Key Info on Contributions for HBCU Initiative

Currently there are nine HBCUs in the Western Area which are receiving endowment funding through the Western Area of the Links, Incorporated, namely: Charles Drew University, Huston-Tillotson University, Jarvis Christian College, Paul Quinn College, Prairie View University, St. Phillips College, Texas Southern University, Texas College and Wiley College. Our Western Area Director has established a goal of raising $50,000 for WA HBCUs in the 2017 – 2019 Biennium.

To achieve this goal, Ambassadors please remind your chapters that they may allocate funds to contribute to the Western Area's three most prominent HBCU fundraising initiatives:

1.The HBCU Biennial "Honor Roll" Campaign -

Contributions to the WA Biennial "Honor Roll" Campaign are recognized as follows:

- Summa Cum Laude -- Chapters contributing $1,000* or more
- Magna Cum Laude -- Chapters contributing $ 500 or more
- Cum Laude -- Chapters contributing $ 250 or more

Chapters contributing $1,000* or more may designate an eligible WA HBCU school the Chapter wishes to receive their contribution. The biennial campaign contribution checks must be made payable to the Foundation, and mailed to the WA Financial Secretary by April 30th, the end of the program year.

2.The HBCU Holiday Giving Campaign -

Contributions may be made by individual members and WA Chapters during the holiday season, with Chapters having the option to designate the school to receive the Chapter's contributions of $500 or more.

3.The HBCU Surplus Campaign (New – beginning May, 2018) -

Chapters are encouraged to donate surplus funds remaining in their budgets at the close of their program year to the WA HBCU fundraising initiative.
